

INA JUNG MANN - BIOGRAPHY

250 words:

Photographer Ina Jungmann takes an art form known for faithfully capturing a moment in time and uses it instead to explore our fractured relationship with place, hope and memory. Fascinated by people's ability to perceive place in terms of present reality, past history, and future dreams, Jungmann uses multiple exposures to create high-end art pieces that are textured, nuanced, and at times otherworldly. Her work has been widely exhibited in Los Angeles, Germany, Syria, Poland, and Switzerland.

Jungmann is a citizen of the world, traveling widely, speaking multiple languages, and using her outsider's eye to bring to life the depths and nuances of a culture and a moment in history. In Damascus only days before the outbreak of Syria's devastating civil war, Jungmann captured some of the final moments of normalcy and peace. Those works have since been exhibited around the world, most notably in Damascus itself, at both the Goethe Institut Damaskus and the Arab International University. She has also turned her lens to examine such historically profound locations as the Murphy Ranch, an abandoned WWII-era Nazi encampment in California's Pacific Palisades.

No matter what the context of her photography, Jungmann's work combines innovation, storytelling and artistry. Educated at UCLA and the Burg Giebichenstein University of Art and Design in Halle, Germany, she has studied with acclaimed photographers James Welling and Rudolf Schäfer. She is honored to be mentored by Japan's Miyako Ishiuchi.

Jungmann remains fascinated by the power of an image to bridge cultural, historical and linguistic chasms. Contact her at [me\[at\]inajungmann.com](mailto:me[at]inajungmann.com).

150 words:

Photographer Ina Jungmann takes an art form known for faithfully capturing a moment in time and uses it instead to explore our fractured relationship with place, hope and memory. Fascinated by people's ability to perceive place in terms of present, past, and future, Jungmann uses multiple exposures to create high-end art pieces that are textured, nuanced, and at times otherworldly. Her work has been widely exhibited in Los Angeles, Germany, Syria, Poland, and Switzerland.

In Damascus only days before the outbreak of Syria's civil war, Jungmann captured some of the final moments of normalcy and peace. She has also turned her lens to the Murphy Ranch, an abandoned WWII-era Nazi encampment in California's Pacific Palisades.

Educated at UCLA and the Burg Giebichenstein University of Art and Design in Halle, Germany, she studied with acclaimed photographers James Welling and Rudolf Schäfer. She is honored to be mentored by Japan's Miyako Ishiuchi.

Contact her at [me\[at\]inajungmann.com](mailto:me[at]inajungmann.com).

50 words:

Photographer Ina Jungmann takes an art form known for capturing reality and uses it to explore our fractured relationship with place, hope and memory. Using multiple exposures, she creates high-end photographs that are textured, nuanced, and otherworldly. She has exhibited in Los Angeles, Germany, Syria, Poland, and Switzerland.

Contact: [me\[at\]inajungmann.com](mailto:me[at]inajungmann.com).

Contact Information

Email: me@inajungmann.com

Instagram: @inajungmann

Twitter: @inajungmann

Facebook: www.facebook.com/

InaJungmannPhoto

Interviews

Limited Runs:

<https://goo.gl/9YexgY>

Fotopolis:

<https://goo.gl/oF6FmP>

Press Release

Open Mind Art Space:

<https://goo.gl/ACzdbk>